Julianna Rose Calabrese

PhD Student in Clinical Psychology

I am clinical psychology PhD student at The Ohio State University. My research interests include affective science, quantitative methods, and data visualization. For more information or if you are interested in collaboration, please contact me via email or Twitter.

🎓 Education

2020 | Present

The Ohio State University
Ph.D. in Clinical Psychology
📍 Columbus, OH

2014 | 2018

Smith College
B.A. in Psychology, cum laude
📍 Northampton, MA

💻 Research Experience

2018 | 2020

Research Coordinator
University of Michigan
📍 Ann Arbor, MI

• Coordinated daily research efforts and projects associated with the Study of Adolescent Neural Development (5R01MH103761-04) and the Study of Adolescent to Adult Neural Development (1R01MH121079-01)

2015 | 2018

Honors Student & Lab Member
Smith College
📍 Northampton, MA

• Received highest honors on senior-year thesis on facial expressivity and emotional coherence in a psychotherapy case study
• Thesis: Don't Take it at Face Value: A Case Study on Facial Expressivity, Emotional Coherence, and Posttraumatic Stress Disorder

💼 Teaching & Clinical Experience

2018

Grader
Smith College
📍 Northampton, MA

• Research Design & Analysis

2017

Teaching Assistant
Smith College
📍 Northampton, MA

• Introduction to Psychology

2015

Clinical Assistant
Pine Grove Behavioral Health & Addiction Services
📍 Hattiesburg, MS

• Conducted clinical duties on pediatric, adult, and geriatric units
• Worked with nursing staff
• Maintained confidentiality in accordance with HIPAA

Contact Info

✉ jrc.contactme@gmail.com
🔗 jrcalabrese.github.io
🐙 github.com/jrcalabrese
🐦 @jrosecalabrese

Skills

Experienced in statistical analysis, data wrangling, and visualization in R and SPSS.

Experienced in project coordination, participant recruitment, and data management.

Full CV available upon request.

Resume created with pagedown.

Source code available here.

Last updated on September 24, 2021.